

Online Learning- The Demand And The Need Of Modern Education

Education is not restricted to school, locality, country, or continent. It has surpassed barriers of time, distance, language and this could have been possible only by cyber education, you can also say e-learning or online education and the need and the demand of Modern education.

(1888PressRelease) August 16, 2007 - It wasn't long ago that when most people thought of tutors, the image that came to mind was a college student arriving at their doorstep. Today all that has changed thanks to the rise of ubiquitous computing and high-bandwidth internet connections. Education is not restricted to school, locality, country, or continent. It has surpassed barriers of time, distance, language and this could have been possible only by cyber education, you can also say e-learning or online learning.

This is all about demand and need of e-learning. Now with e-learning, you can learn and get homework help at anytime, after school, late night or in early morning. It provides a platform for learning through internet. If you are at home or away from home, and want to prepare for tomorrows test just log on to your laptop, online institutes will always help you "24X7".It uses the modern technology of virtual classroom environment, where student can ask their problem to their tutors using text or voice chat. They share a special whiteboard where they can write freehand. So if you have an exam after a week and you want to revise things in a lesser span of time like for 20 days or 30 days.

Online tutoring industry is packed up with many companies which provide variety of educational services. But there is hardly anyone who focuses on quality teaching and concept building and specialized coaching or guidance for K-12 studies, precollege and college level studies. It helps students to perform better in examination and hence in scoring good grades.

"No child left behind act" provide thrust to online educational industry and boosting online one to one live tutoring. The schools are unable to provide quality education and necessary infrastructure to all the students and this encouraged online tutoring education. Schools and college faces lot of problems in implementing the law. So here the role of online tutoring comes into picture To impart educational knowledge to each and everyone, some companies have contracted with NGO's to help poor and needy people. Now, many people have already enrolled their children with online tutoring institutes. Here parents can keep an eye on their child's performance and can see whether their children are feeling comfortable with tutor or not.
